

The decision of Sinclair Broadcasting to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line (profit) and less of what we need for our democracy.

This is not an issue of liberal vs. conservative, but of fair and balanced reporting, and of the FCC doing its job to serve the public, not the companies it was create to regulate.
